

SELF-PACED PRACTICE

Seven days. One realistic reset.

This is not a detox, treatment, or purity test. Use one week to notice repeated contact, try practical changes, and keep the single routine that fits your life.

PROGRESS, NOT PERFECTION

☐ Day 01 - Notice what repeats: Write down the three plastic contacts that repeat most often in your day. Choose only one to work on first.

WHAT I NOTICED

☐ Day 02 - Change one hot-food habit: Move one reheating or hot-food routine away from plastic when a safe practical alternative is available.

WHAT I NOTICED

☐ Day 03 - Choose a reusable drink container: Use a glass or stainless-steel bottle or cup for one routine that normally relies on disposable plastic.

☐ Day 04 - Store one meal differently: Use glass, ceramic, or stainless steel for one leftover or prepared meal when practical.

DAYS 05-07

Keep what can last.

A small repeated change is more useful than an expensive or short-lived overhaul.

☐ Day 05 - Remove one disposable item: Choose one recurring single-use cup, utensil, plate, or takeout container to avoid or replace.

☐ Day 06 - Improve one indoor-air routine: Use a damp-dusting, vacuuming, or ventilation routine that fits your home and outdoor-air conditions.

WHAT I NOTICED

☐ Day 07 - Keep what worked: Review the week. Keep the one change that felt realistic, and explain one evidence-aware idea to someone else.

THE ONE CHANGE I AM KEEPING

ONE ACCURATE SENTENCE I CAN SHARE

Keep medical care, hygiene, food safety, infant feeding, accessibility, and emergencies ahead of plastic-reduction goals.
